This is an enlarged print of a photograph, taken in about the year 1900, of a centuries old Protestant Church in Hagsfeld near Karlsruhe, Baden, Germany. Johannes Mainzer and his family and many of his ancestors were members of this congregation.

The church building and some of the records were destroyed by fire during the night of April 24-25, 1944, in the course of an air raid on Karlsruhe by American and English bombers. A new church of modern architecture was built on the same site in 1952.
